ADVOCATE OF THE MONTH:

China Moran

"Becoming a CASA advocate was a decision rooted in my passion for supporting children who need a voice. With a background in the medical field and a deep interest in mental health and addiction services, I have seen firsthand how difficult circumstances can impact a child's well-being. I wanted to be part of the solution—to advocate for children in the community system who need stability, support, and someone to truly listen to them."

"This journey has reinforced my belief that advocacy is powerful. A child's future can change simply because someone took the time to stand up for them. I became a CASA advocate because I want to be that person—someone who listens, supports, and fights for what is right."
